FRESH IDEAS FROM TOP DESIGN SHOWS

In the dining area, a chandelier from Flos by famed designer Achilles Castiglioni suspends 12 hand-blown crystal cones with sandblasted edges over an asymmetrical table and chairs set from B&B Italia's Maxalto Collection.

Contemporary Italian furnishings by architect and designer Antonio Citterio give discreet nods to traditionalism in the living area. Here, a cascading Bocci light fixture adds whimsy while golden-mustard pillows color the neutral scheme.

Shimmering mother-of-pearl by Maya Romanoff for Donghia adorns a wall in the foyer, introducing the airy ambiance of the penthouse. An etched-glass pocket door divides the space from the study, allowing light while providing privacy.

A POSH PENTHOUSE BLENDS DRAMATIC MATERIALS
WITH LIGHT TOUCHES FOR A TIMELESS AMBIANCE

In a harmonious balance of light and dark, interior designer Jennifer Corredor transformed this 21st-floor penthouse in Bal Harbour with a sophisticated selection of classic and contemporary styles. From the foyer wall exquisitely embellished with mother-of-pearl, to the powder room bathed in marble, to the master bath clad in onyx, luxurious materials create backdrops for sleek yet inviting Italian furnishings throughout. "I wanted a place that was totally different from my New York house of 20 years, which is more traditional," the husband says. "But I also wanted it to be comfortable."

Corredor's elegant design satisfies, evoking a fresh look that is both current and enduring. "I tried to incorporate a transitional feel to the project," she says. "My intention was to introduce a light and airy feeling, without being too modern."

"I like to respect the spaces that I'm working with, so my style usually has a light and serene feeling," interior designer Jennifer Corredor says. Selecting an ambiance is an important decision, according to Corredor's design secrets.

The Atlantic Ocean provides a backdrop for a camel-colored ottoman and off-white sofas in the living area. Jasper Morrison's barstools for Cappellini pull up to the kitchen's breakfast bar, left, where stainless-steel Miele appliances contrast with wenge-wood cabinetry.

Corredor achieved the owners' desired look by redesigning a pre-existing apartment that had been demolished and overseeing the completion of construction and installation — giving the couple turnkey service in time for them to enjoy the holidays together in their South Florida retreat.

Corredor's approach juxtaposes clean lines with dimensional elements, evident in the living area's Persian rug and custom-designed tufted-leather cocktail table that center contemporary sofas and smooth cabinetry. A palette that contrasts neutral tones with dark woods — splashed by colorful accessories and artwork — anchors this space and defines the rest of the penthouse. "Exotic woods, such as African mahogany, anigre and cherry, add substance and character," she says.

This interplay of light and dark resonates in the kitchen, where white Caesar stone countertops break up the expanse of ebonized wenge-wood cabinetry. Cream-colored stone flooring flows into the adjacent dining area and gracefully connects the public areas. In the private spaces, slender and refined furnishings sharpen the soft curves of the guest bedroom, while pleated wall covering and an area rug bordered in leather piping bring texture to the master bedroom.

Philippe Starck's chair for driade pulls up to the desk below Venezuelan artist Martha Salas-Kesser's "Spring Fantasy" in the study area of the guest bedroom, where a Paola Lenti ottoman in signature woven rope commands attention. Hanging above the leather sofa, another Salas-Kesser canvas, titled "Passive Fire," was commissioned for the room.

Inspirational panoramas of the Atlantic Ocean round out the serenity of this contemporary Miami retreat. "The ocean is part of the apartment's landscape," Corredor says, allowing the endless horizon to permeate her design.

Brazilian mahogany warms the floors of the guest bedroom and reflects in tones from Cari Cohen's "Dream" painting over the bed. Above, a hand-blown Murano glass pedestal vase by David Palterer stands poised like a tall flower stalk in the powder room, whose wall is covered in an entire slab of marble.

“EACH PERSON WHO ENTERS THIS INCLUDING MYSELF,” CORREDOR SAYS.

FontanaArte lamps softly illuminate glass shades and bases in the master bedroom. Pale teal Corragio sheers add a tint of color, while pleated wall covering brings texture and interest to the space. Glowing waves of gold surround the opulent master bath, left, with wall-to-wall book-matching onyx and sink bowls that echo the stone's veins.
